

APAS granted intervenor status in Carbon Tax court case

For Immediate Release, December 10, 2018 – The Agricultural Producers Association of Saskatchewan (APAS) was pleased to learn this morning that leave has been granted in its application for intervenor status in the Saskatchewan Court of Appeal reference case on the Federal Carbon Tax.

APAS President Todd Lewis says the organization is looking forward to ensuring that the agricultural producer's perspective on this matter is heard.

"Saskatchewan producers manage 43% of Canada's cropland and 35% of the grasslands," Lewis says. "We are deeply invested in finding the best way forward for both the health of our environment and the agricultural industry."

Background: APAS is Saskatchewan's general farm organization – formed to provide farmers and ranchers with a democratically elected, grassroots, non-partisan, producer-run organization based on rural municipal boundaries. As the united voice of agricultural producers and ranchers in Saskatchewan, we strive to represent the views of a wide variety of agricultural stakeholders in order to form comprehensive policies that can benefit all sectors of society. APAS is a member of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture.
